

Sister Sheba is from Oakland. I first met her during her last year in high school at Castlemont in E. Oakland. She walked into the office and wanted to join the BPP. I found out that Sister Sheba had organized a strike and walk out at the school and was the leader of the BSU on campus. Since she was a student getting ready for college (UC Berkeley), she started working out of the W. Berkeley Branch which was near the UC campus.

Sister Sheba is a bright and intelligent person. She started working at the George Jackson Clinic on Adeline St. which was run by the BPP. She worked under Dr. Burt Small, the leading Dr. on site. She gained great knowledge of medicines and treatments and she later got a job working for Dr. Small at his clinic.

Sister Sheba joined It's About Time around 1998 after finding one of our newsletters at Carol's Books in Sacramento. Since that time she has been an asset to the legacy of the BPP. She helped found the Books behind Bars program for It's About Time, has spoken and MC'd many programs for It's About Time, and was a key organizer for the 35th and 40th year reunions and a host of other events. We salute Sister Sheba for her tireless work on behalf of the struggle.
